

At the heart of the Supervision Around the World (SAW) Project's mission is the belief that global supervision practices can greatly benefit from shared insights and collaborative efforts. Our goal is to enable countries to exchange findings and work together to create solutions.

Positive change through collaboration is what we strive for, and we're excited to share some updates about how we are fostering relationships with our partners and our upcoming joint initiatives.

The SAW Project is thrilled to collaborate with NEC Digital Studio to design a user-friendly and interactive web-based information repository. The people-first digital studio specializes in evidence-led solutions that transform everyday services on a large scale. Our shared commitment to leveraging technology for innovation and improving community services was the focus of our June workshop at the Modernising Criminal Justice Conference in London.

Strengthening our ICPA Partnership

We are pleased to announce a new partnership agreement with the International Corrections and Prisons Association \(ICPA\). This partnership will allow us to collaborate on various projects and share forward-thinking solutions on a global platform.

Kenya, Rwanda, and Uganda Working with the Project to Share Justice Alternatives

SAW

In a groundbreaking collaboration, criminal justice leaders from Kenya, Rwanda, and Uganda are working with the SAW Project to document and share details of community-based local best practices. These innovative models will be showcased on a user-friendly website, offering new solutions for global implementation. This initiative addresses common challenges in justice systems worldwide, such as limited resources, pre-trial supervision models, community reintegration, and reducing recidivism. By learning from each other, we can adopt effective strategies that tackle these issues head-on and improve justice systems worldwide.

We have been invited to present these innovative solutions at the ICPA Singapore conference in September 2024. This platform will allow us to share successful program models and demonstrate the SAW Project's interactive information repository, featuring real-world examples of support and community reintegration systems.
